Heavy Precipitation Outlook

Flash Flood Prediction Program

---

WARM, SUNNY AND DRY TODAY

- High-pressure builds over the District today resulting in more seasonable weather with mostly sunny skies along with dry conditions.
- High temperatures will reach the low to mid 70's across the plains this afternoon with low to mid 60's along the foothills. Overnight temperatures will remain mild as they only dip into the 40's.
- A few scattered clouds this afternoon and early evening with skies gradually clearing into the later portions of this evening.

STORM RAINFALL POTENTIAL AND DURATION: No precipitation is expected today.

A LOOK AHEAD: A similar start to Friday as high temperatures reach the low to mid 70's in the afternoon with a chance for widely scattered high-based rain showers/thunderstorms. Rain chances pick up into the weekend with an even better chance for rain/thunderstorms Saturday. Rain chances continue into Sunday as a disturbance moves through bringing a chance for heavy rain Sunday afternoon and early evening.

MONITOR NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE FOR SEVERE WEATHER STATEMENTS.
